Veuve Clicquot

In 1805, Madame Clicquot, a young widow of 27 years, took over the reins of the House founded in Reims in 1772 and became one of the first business women in history. Audacious and visionary, she made her champagne known to the world.

Yellow Label

Champagne house is eventually judged on the quality of its Brut Non Vintage. It is in the making of such a wine that the true Art of Champagne blending reveals itself. Our Brut Yellow Label reflects the superb vineyards we own and the consistent nature of our house style. Yellow Label manages to reconcile two opposing factors - forcefulness and finesse.

Rosé

Veuve Clicquot was the first champagne house to commercialise rosé champagne in 1775. This fresh young wine is now a fully-fledged member of the champagne world after having slowly matured in our cellars as well as in the minds of our winemakers. Our Rosé is the end result of a desire to create a pink champagne with a delightfully luscious, fruit-based charm.

Krug . Dom Pérignon

Krug is a 'Petite Maison'. Yet it is legendary and renowned. It is often compared to other 'Grands Vins' for being the Haute-Côte of Champagne. Krug was strikingly not founded with the vision of a business, but with the vision of a taste on its own, still honored and amplified by an unbroken family line, currently the fifth and sixth generations still participate in the tastings and 'assemblages'.

Krug Grande Cuvée

Gold in the glass, it unleashes graceful streams of bubbles that entice you and an extravagantly expansive bouquet that challenges you to take that first sip. Then, all at once, those Krug sensations sweep over you - subtle and sensual, bold and forceful, complex yet so remarkably crisp and clean. More extraordinary still is the exquisite tingling freshness that seems to linger forever, willing you to hold onto it, deliciously, just for the sheer heaven of it...

Krug Grande Cuvée

Dom Pérignon is luxury champagne that is inspired from the work of the mythical creator of Champagne, the Benedictine monk, Dom Pérignon, in the 17th century. He pursued his life with one goal in mind: to create the best wine in the world. After years of work, Dom Pérignon is said to have announced: 'I am drinking stars'. His wine reached the table of Louis XIV who declared that luxury champagne was born.

Dom Pérignon Blanc

Fresh, crystalline and sharp, the first nose unveils an unusual dimension, an aquatic vegetal world with secret touches of white pepper and gardenia. The wine reveals airy, gentle richness before exhaling peaty scents. The finish gradually unfurls and then settles, smooth, mellow all-encompassing.

Dom Pérignon Rosé

The first perfumed floral notes quickly open up into orange peel and dried fruits, with the characteristics of a well-matures harvest and woody spices. The envelope is ample and the structure remarkably balanced, precise and sophisticated. The warm, radiant complexity persists and vibrates, barely touched by the subtlest hint of bitterness.
